THE EVENING POST.

ANOTHER WAY,

Andrew Lang in Chicago News. "Come to me in my dreams and then," One saith. "I shall be well again. For then the night will more than pay The hapeless longing of the day." Nay, come not then in draums, my sweet, With shalowy robes and silent feet, And with the voice and with the eyes Teat greet me in a soft surprise.

Last night, last night, in droams we met, And how to-day shall? forget, Or how, remembering, restrain Or how, remembering, restrain My incommunicable paint

Nay, where thy land and people are Dwell thou remote, apart, afar, Nor minute with the snapes that aweep The medancholy ways of sleep.

But if, perobance, the shadows break, if dreams depart and men awake, if face to face at length we see, Be thing the voice to well-ome me.

A FAIR FRAUD.

She called herself Miss Montmorenci, and she was spending a few weeks in the aristocratic little town of Lowdon when Clem Lander met her. No one knew where she came from or who she was, but the men who saw her at least were unanimous in the opinion that she was divine in dress as well as appearance.

As for Clem Lander, the richest young man in town, he seemed to have completely lost his head. He was engaged to marry Lon Putney, but after Miss Montmorenci's appearance in town, he deserted her entirely and became the reigning belle's most devoted admirer.

He showered presents upon the new divinity and in due time they were mar-ried. Mrs. Lander developed the quali-ties of a reckless married flirt after mar-riage, which caused Clem the greatest misery, for he was of a very jealous dis-position. Particularly was she friendly with an Englishman at the hotel who called himself the Hon. Mr. Lydney. They sang together in the evening, and went out boating and succeeded in working the poor husband into a terrible state

Clem demanded that his wife should not see the Englishman any more and when she refused he went in search of the cause of all his trouble, with the avowed intention of killing him. The Hon. Mr. Lydney received him very placidly and the two held a long con-term to the same individual.

head haughtily, "What does that mean?" "It means that I have played my game and won it. You are Adelaide Clancey, ex-companion to Lady Montmorenci, whose jewels and the sum of £5,000 you stole and ran away to America with. You were foolish to take that name. I tracked you by it, and as I could not arrest you then in the States, and knowing your fondness for a flirtation, I made love to you as an honorable, and got you to run away with me to English

"You villian!" she uttered. "It was well done, was it not, to deceive a woman so brutally, for the sake of arresting

'That is my busines," he answered, "What? To deceive women? To be a brute? I believe you. But I shall write to my husband, and tell him my letter to him was a jest. He loves me; he will believe me. He will come and save me from you, if it takes his whole

"Very likely," he returned, sarcasti-cally, "but which husband? Lander knows all about the other one, for I told knows all about the other one, for I told him. I did not tell him you were a thief, nor who I was. I could see there was enough love left in his heart still for you to make him warn you if I had, and spoil my game. But I left a letter for him, and he knows that, too, now.'

She was silent for a little, the handsome face set like a stone. Then she said:

"Do you mean to take me back to England?"

"I do."
"I will never go."
"We shall see about that."
"I shall escape you," she answered.
He smiled, and never left her for an instant till the carriage came that was to

A BAD MARRIAGE.

HOW AN ATTRACTIVE YOUNG LADY WAS ENTRAPPED.

The Story Encarthed in Divorce Court-A School Girl's Desire to Stroll Gets Her Into Trouble-Wedded Komantie.

Harristury Correspondence N. Y. Journal. One of the most remantic divorce cases known to the courts of this commonwealth was heard in Dauphin County just ten years ago. It is actuality in practical life that is stranger than fiction.

In 1875 Iola E. Oyster was one of the prettiest maideus in Lagrange, Mo. She was the daughter of wealthy parents, who were proud of her for her many charming graces. At the age of 17 years she was sent to a female college at Quincy, Ill., and there pursued her studies with dilligrange. es with dilligence.

One pleasant afternoon in May, while she was leisurely strolling through the wooded park which surrounded the college building, she was accosted by John B. Redmond, a stranger to her, who invited her to walk with him. She refused to do so and continued her journey

Several weeks subsequently Miss Oyster met the same man, and he again urged her to accompany him in a walk through the town. School was over for the day and the young lady felt the need of recreation, and inspired by the salubrious air, she innocently started with the man down the public highway.

During the walk Redmond proposed marriage to the young lady, but she emphatically refused, and when he became convinced that she was determined not to consent to marriage with him he threatened to report her for talking to men and leaving the school grounds, A QUIET WEDDING-NO CARDS.

Miss Oyster was striving for class honors, and she recognized the importance of a strict conformity to the rules of the school. Thus intimidated she consented to go to Hannibal, Mo., twenty miles distant, and go through a mar-riage ceremony with a man whom she had previously declared she could not

Miss Oyster immediately and indig-nantly left the house, and returned to school a few hours later, where she con-tinued her studies, day after day, until about one year after, when she graduated with high honors
She returned to her Lagrange home and entered society there as an accomplished young lady. Her experience with Redmond was a thing of the past, and she seldom thought of it.

One day she met Henry Oerter, a dashing young Pennsylvanian, who was visiting at Lagrange. Both were smitten at first sight, and their period of courtship was of short duration.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Oerter came to Cumberland County, Pa., to live, and the young husband, who had plenty of cash, decided to build a handsome residence for his pretty wife. During the time occupied in its erection the young couple engaged quarters at Harrisburg, and lived there happily and quietly until one day Mrs. Oerter, upon entering her bedroom found a note upon her bed summoning her to room 17, where a gentleman desired to have a conversation with her.

When the husband returned to the hotel in the evening his wife informed Oerter cheerfully agreed to this bargain and paid over the cash and took his paper in return.

Several weeks after Redmond appeared on the scene again and demanded more money. This time, however, Oarter's attorney was on hand, who informed Mr. Redmond that he could keep out of prison only by quitting the vicinity, which he was not slow in doing.

Mrs. Oerton in the name of Mrs. Redmond at once filed a petition for a divorce from Redmond, whom she had not seen from the day of the alleged marriage in

The divorce was granted and Mr. and

Mrs. Oerter were again joined in mar-riage, and now they are living in their new home in one of the loveliest spots in the Cumberland valley, and are perfectly happy.

CHOICE CABINET WOODS.

A Talk With a Dealer About Their Value and Uses. The Costly French Walnut. "French walnut is the costlicat of all cabinet woods," said a Centre-street dealer to a reporter of the New York Econing Post. "It does not come from France at all," he continued, "but grows in Persia, Circassia and Asia Minor. To work the logs into veneers we first steam them until they are almost as soft as butper then we fasten them to an iron ben hich revolves around a finely-tempered knife, with a razor-like edge, of the length as the log. Every time this beam turns around it moves a fraction of an inch nearer to the knife, and a thin sheet of wood is shaved off smoothly and laid on a pile on the floor. These sheets are 1-120 of an Inch in thickness, but frequently we shave off veneers as thin as 175 to the inch. The veneers used on furniture are somewhat thicker, the thinner ones being used on picture frames. They are backed up with paper before being alord or The latter was before being glued on. The latter are also used to some extent for covering

"What is the value of the French wal-"I have known it to sell as high as $2 pound. At the Paris Exposition one burl' was sold for $5,000, and its weight did not exceed 2,200 pounds. A burl, you know, is a large tough knot or excrescence that grows upon the trunk of a tree. The French walnut is a small tree, crooked and dwarfed in its growth. Its value is entirely in these curious tough and contorted bumps that grow upon it." "How do other woods compare in value with the French walnut?"

"Next to it, ebony is probably the most valuable. Some ebony sells for $250 a ton. Size is the feature that counts in this wood. Rosewood and mahogany are always in demand. The best mahogany comes from San Domingo. Next in value are the mahoganies of Cuba, Honduras, Mexico and Africa. Fair quality rosewood will sell in the log for from 5 to 8 cents a pound. French walnut can occasionally, if poor, be bought for as low as 3 cents a pound, but the finer burls readily bring hundreds of dollars. Great care, however, must be exercised in buying these buris, as their value is often lessened by the existence of hollows right in the heart of the wood, the result of decay or malformation. Sometimes these hollows are filled by fraudulent dealers with foreign substances. Manure pressed to a requisite degree of hardness is much used for this

'Do you deal much in native woods ?" To some extent, but for choice cabi-net work the costller foreign woods are, of course, more in demand. Ash and caple burls are plentiful and cheap, selling for from two to four cents a pound. Black walnut burls bring ten to twelve cents a pound. The demand for choice cabinet woods is constantly increasing. In the houses of the wealthy the fine woodwork constitutes a large item in the expense of construction."

"Are there many dealers in such woods in the United States?"

"The number is small, but the busi-ness is large, and the competition growing keener every day. One of our firm makes frequent trips to Central America and elsewhere to look for fine specimens of these woods."

MILLIONS TO THE POOR.

Enormous Bequests of an Italian Duchess to Various Charities.

A DINNER IN BOSTON.

Rather a Cheerful Time One Way and Another For the Guests,

From the New Orleans Picayune,
There were two children in the family, a girl and a boy, of 10 and 11 years, re-spectively. Very naturally they were not given seats at the table, but they were present none the less. The cherubs stood at either end of the festive board Hannibal until he appeared at the hotel at Harrisburg.

In her depositions she alleged that she ignorantly submitted to the form of a marriage ceremony, but did not subsequently confirm the marriage by any act of schabitation or otherwise. ing upon his mother's shoulder and the girl reclining gracefully upon that of her father. The attitude of each was studied evidently the result of drill—and at in-tervals they joined in the general conver-sation, somewhat as follows:

The hostess would introduce the discussion of Browning's poetry, and after each one of the guests had expressed an opinion, favorable or otherwise, concerning that gentieman's verse, she would re fer the matter laughingly to her "little daughier," and the latter, being primed with an appropriate speech beforehand would spring the same with charming naivette upon the assembled company Of course, the infantile bon mot would elicit applause, whereat the artiess in-genue would hide a modest blush upon her papa's bosom. Next came the boy's turn to utter an impromptu withcism received with such expressions: "Doocid clever, by Jove!" etc., etc.,—and so on until the ladies took their departure, when the kindergarten was retired to the nursery and the men, with a sigh of relief, betook themselves to their cigars.

DRUNKENNESS OR THE LIQUOR HABIT CAN BE CURED BY

ADMINISTERING DR. HAINES'

Can be given in a cup of confee or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it. It is absolutely harmless, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreek. It has been given in thousands of cases, and in every instance a perfect cure has followed. IT NEVER FAILS. The system once impresented with the Specific, it becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist. For saic by S. P., WARE, under the Ebbitt House; R. K.
